BE ONE OF THOSE who make the best of life. After all, in the long run, the honey of life is for those who seek it, and the advantages for those that strive for them. Do not be aumbered among those gloomy people who have nothing to smile about. Remember always that heartiness depends largely upon healthiness. No one can be quite as hearty as he would desire to be if he is not as healthy as he ought to he. Good healthy is essential to bright spirits and a bright outlook, and any measures wherehy the physical standard can be improved are worthy of careful consideration. Those GRANTED

A Sound Investment

That gives an immediate, consistent and continuous return while still retaining its capital value. The will last a lifetime. It is Hygienic because the ventilation is perfect. It is ideally comfortable because the Vi-Spring System ensures uniformity over its entire surface—it can't sag anywhere. If a greater weight is applied to any point it meets with an increasing support. Consequently, one experiences the feeling of floating over a delightfully resilient surface which cannot impede the circulation of the blood by undue pressure on any of the muscles.

To those who appreciate the importance to health of sound, refreshing sleep we suggest an early investigation of the Vi-Spring Mattress at our Showrooms, or writing for full particulars, which will be sent post free on request.

CARRICKMACROSS BOYCOTTING - CASE. CARRICKMACROSS BOYCOTTING-CASE.

THOMAS McCLUSKEY v. KATIE AND MARY JANE HOEY.

Mr. Davison instructed by Mr. Henry Murrhy) applied on behalf of the plaintiff for an order substituting service of an interiocutory an interiocutory service of an interiocutory solicitors, who had entered an appearance on behalf of the defendants. Counsel said this was a boycotting case from Carrickmacross. It appeared that the father of the defendants, who are minors, died intestate in 1907, leaving surviving his second wife, who was a sister of the plaintiff, and four children of the first marriage, of whom the defendants are two. In 1908 the widow caused the lands, consisting of 78 acres, situated at Derrylavin, to be put up for sale by public auction. They were purchased in trust for the plaintiff or 2825, and the defendants paternal uncle, who was present at the sale, approved of the price. The plaintiff went into possession, and let the lands for cropping and grazing. In 1915 an agitation was started, having for its object the restoration of fine lands to the defendants are the sale, approved of the lands and redament had left the lands, and a recent attempt to let the test of the price. The lands were now derelict, and the plaintiff had been prevented excressing his legal rights. It had been found impossible to effect personal service of the interlocutory injunction, and it was alleged that sympathisers with the defendants were assisting them to evade

England and Ireland.

We still cherish (even the most loyal of us) the tradition that the English are a stupid people. The events of the last we years do not seem to have shaken his tradition. We do not notice any stupid people. The events of the last two years do not seem to have shaken this tradition. We do not notice any change in that slightly contemptuous tone in which our literary men and newspapers have always written about England and the English. We alone among Europeans have not made the discovery which is, beyond question, the biggest feature of this biggest of all wars. The war has proved that England is to-day easily the greatest country in the world. Nobody denies that once—perhaps, twice—in some supporting points of which have been taken; and the number of prisoners so far captured that England is to-day easily the greatest country in the world. Nobody denies that once—perhaps, twice—in history England was the greatest country in the world; but three years ago she seemed to have lost her greatness for ever. Her statesmanship was deplorable; she had almost ceased to be a military Power; her democracy appeared to be selfish, turbulent, and thoughtless. Her Navy was the only thing that kept all the freshness and glamour of its ancient glory. The war came, and England changed as by a miracle. For a few months, while the first Expeditionary Force played heroically old state of things. Then quietly, quickly, and surely. England beam to recal her tue soil. The galahy, done for the galahy done to the sease of the sease of the friends (ell away as a gament. "Like some tall palm the mystic fabric sprang." England become once more a great nation greatly at war. Bhe produced vast armies: her hastily trained recruits have beaten the best soldings of the one country in the world that lived for nothing but war. Her Nay took condient and absolute command of the seas. She became the flargest and most efficient manufactures of munitions in two hemispheres. Her wealth, incovered to he vast and secessible, was put at the service of all her Allies. For every stroke of he wealth, incovered to he vast and seessible, was put at the service of all her Allies. Stupidity, like brilliancy, is, in nations, a superficial quality. Character is the real thing, and the English character, with all its faults, spells greatness. The sooner we in Ireland recognise that greatness, the better things will be for Irishmen and Irish affairs. We must be, under any conceivable form.

Ireland's traditions of military greatness, of 'dashing service in a thousand fields, of lost causes and impossible ambitions, are as dear to England's heart as to our own. She has clung to the hope of incorporating these fine Irish qualities in affairs of government as successfully as she has incorporated them in affairs of government as successfully as she has incorporated them in affairs of arms. It will be a tragic thing if, at the moment when Ireland is forced to revise her estimate of England's character for the better, England is forced to revise her estimate of Ireland's character for the better, England is forced to revise her estimate of England's character for the better, England is forced to revise her estimate of Ireland's character for the better, England is forced to revise her estimate of Ireland's character for the better, England is forced to revise her estimate of Ireland's character for the better, England is forced to revise her estimate of Ireland's character for the better, England is forced to revise her estimate of Ireland's character for the better, England is forced to revise her estimate of Ireland's character for the better, England is forced to revise her estimate of Ireland's character for the better, England is forced to revise her estimate of Ireland's character for the better, England is forced to revise her estimate of Ireland's character for the better, England is forced to revise her estimate of Ireland's character for the better, England is forced to revise her estimate of Ireland's character for the better, England is forced to revise her estimate of Ireland's character for the better, England is forced to revise her estimate of Ireland's character for the better, England is forced to revise her estimate of Ireland's character for the better, England is forced to revise her estimate of Ireland's character for the better, England is forced to revise her estimate of Ireland's character for the better, England is forced to revise her estimate of Ireland's character the English people are puzzled and saddened, not by Ireland's defection from not all that they expect, but something not all that they expect, but something England, but by Ireland's defection from herself. They see a chapter in Irish his-tory, which began gloriously, threatening to end in a manner entirely destructive of he traditions and ideals that have made Ireland dear to England. | We have said, Ireland dear to England. We have said, till we are weary of saying it, that the Irish regiments in the field carry Ireland's honour in their hands. THE KING OF RUMANIA'S MESSAGE.

rania, says The Times, appears for the present to be more stable, and the latest news show has the Second Rumanian Army is successful resisting the Austro-German attempts to pentate Rumanian territory. At the same time the moving message communicated by the King of Rumania to our special correspondent, Mr. Stanley Washburn, loses none of its urgency, and there are signs that it has made a deep impression upon this country. The King and its brave soldiers may rest assured that, in price of engrossing procecupations in the Weshad on other fronts, there is no subject more constantly in the thoughts of the British nation at this juncture than the position of Rumania To King and nation alike we would say in replication to the process of the that their unfaltering allegiance to the All rause is regarded in every Allied country with the deepest gratitude, and we would repeat that Rumanian necessities are receiving earnest and resources of the Allies will be so d

MR. REDMOND'S VOTE OF CENSURE.

Mr. William O'Brien, M.P., examines in The Times the terms of Mr. Redmond's vote of cen-sure, and writes:—. If the Home Rule Government, which was for "six years in the hollow of his hands," has eventuated in martial law and the utter bedeviment of Home Rule, on Mr. Rednond's own head rests the main responsi-Reducad's own head rest: the main responsi-bility. If the friendliness of the Irish race up to and after the outbreak of the war has been changed to anger, disgust, and disaffection, the disaster is mainly due to his own failure to secure the Home Rule settlement by consent, which he might easily have had as the accom-paniment of a united and victorious recruiting campaign; to the miserable self-contradictions in the attitude of M.
